

Student Body President

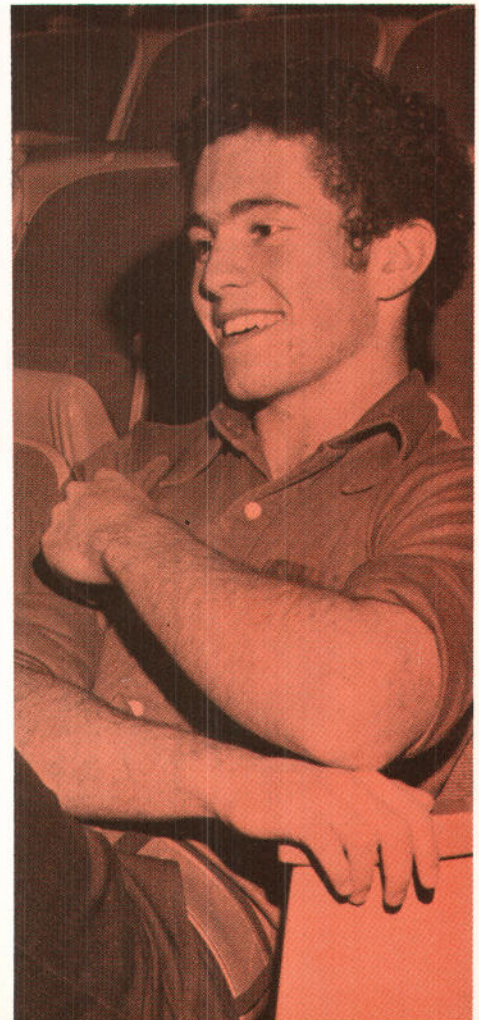

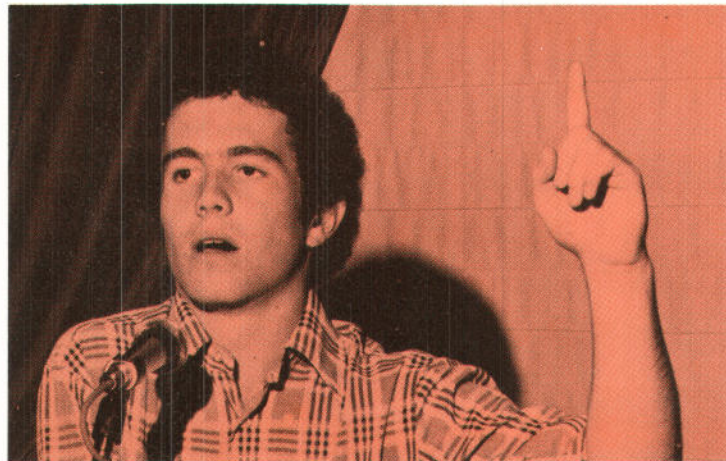

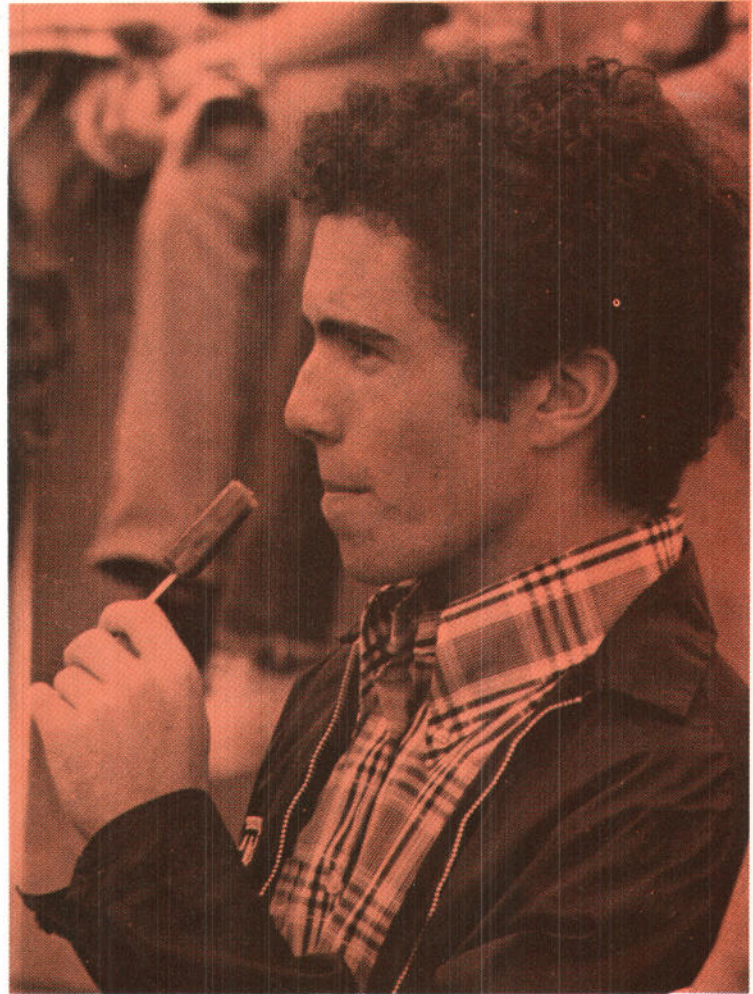

Highland —

It has been said, "There is no point at which having arrived, we can remain." Through the efforts of an entire studentbody, Highland has arrived again to the position of prominence and leadership for which it is so well known. We must keep this momentum going through our thoughts, actions, and representation to the entire community.

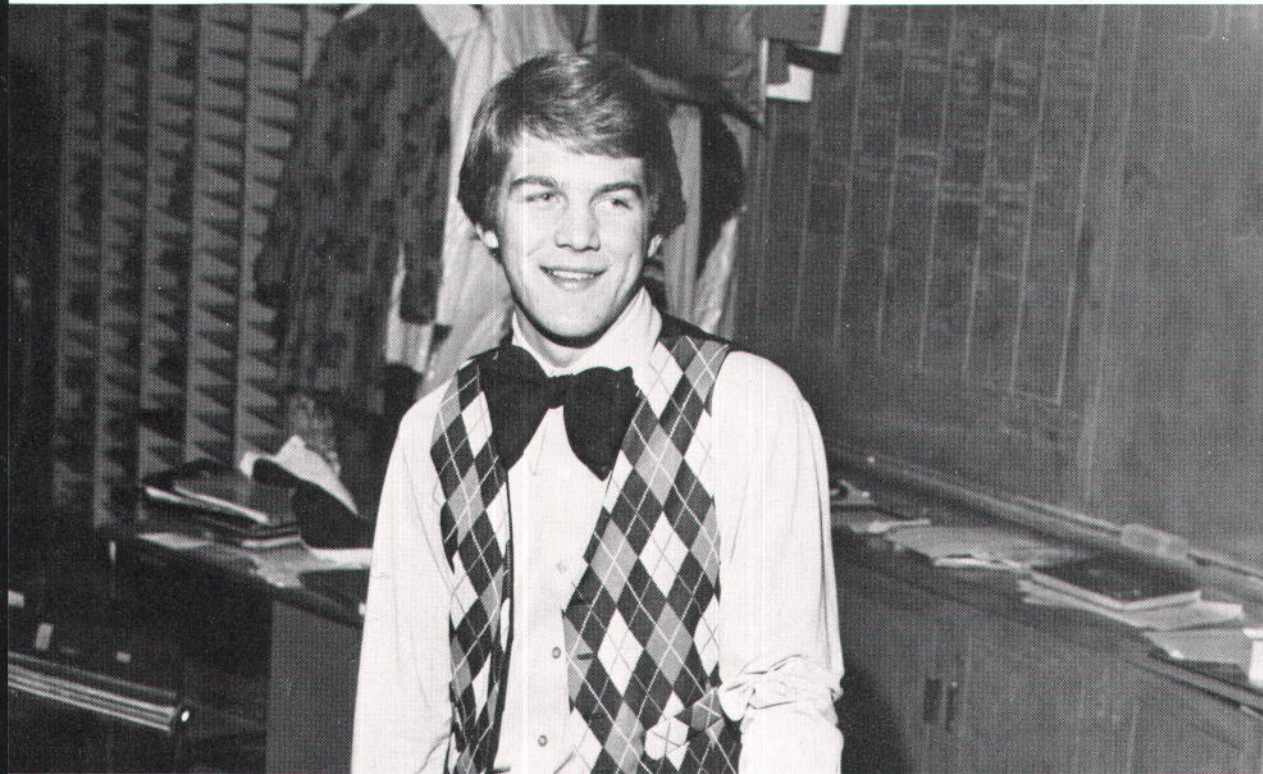

We've had three short years to meet, to know, and finally realize the value of each of our friends. For the seniors, these years are ending, but the friendships will always remain. The Juniors and Sophomores still have time to realize the value of their friends and what it means to belong to a school with as high a reputation as Highland.

I sincerely thank you for the opportunity of letting me represent you. It has been a challenge that will never be forgotten and never regretted. I will always think of Highland with the utmost pride and respect because you — the studentbody of Highland — have lived The Return of the Ram.

Rob Campbell

Student Body Officers

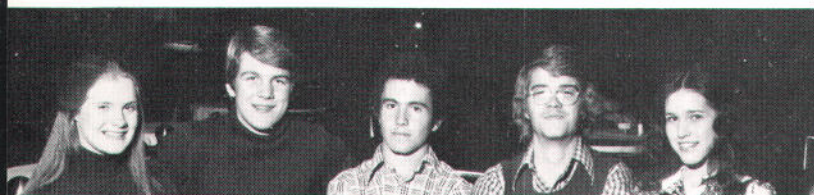

Rob Young
Vice President

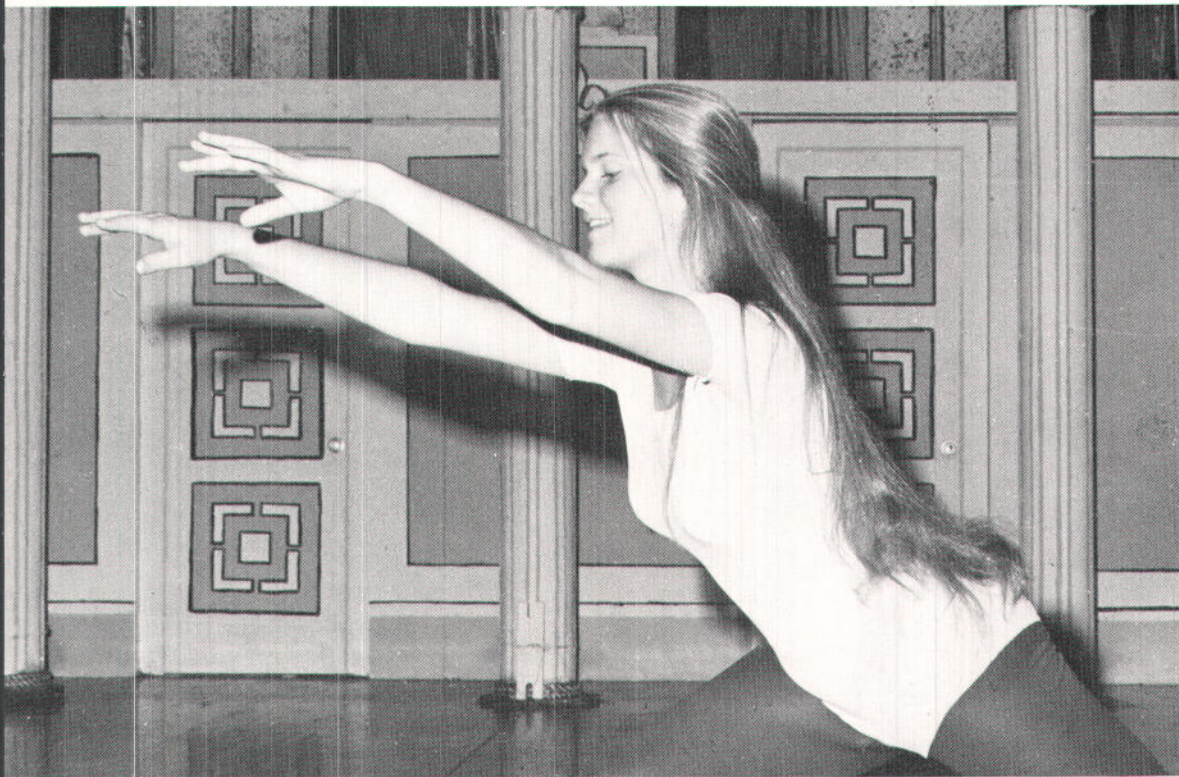

On and off the basketball court, Rob provided leadership necessary to be successful in whatever he did. With his ability to discern between the need for humor and the need for concern, he was one individual who always had the right thing to say at the right time.

Debbie Wadsworth, Secretary

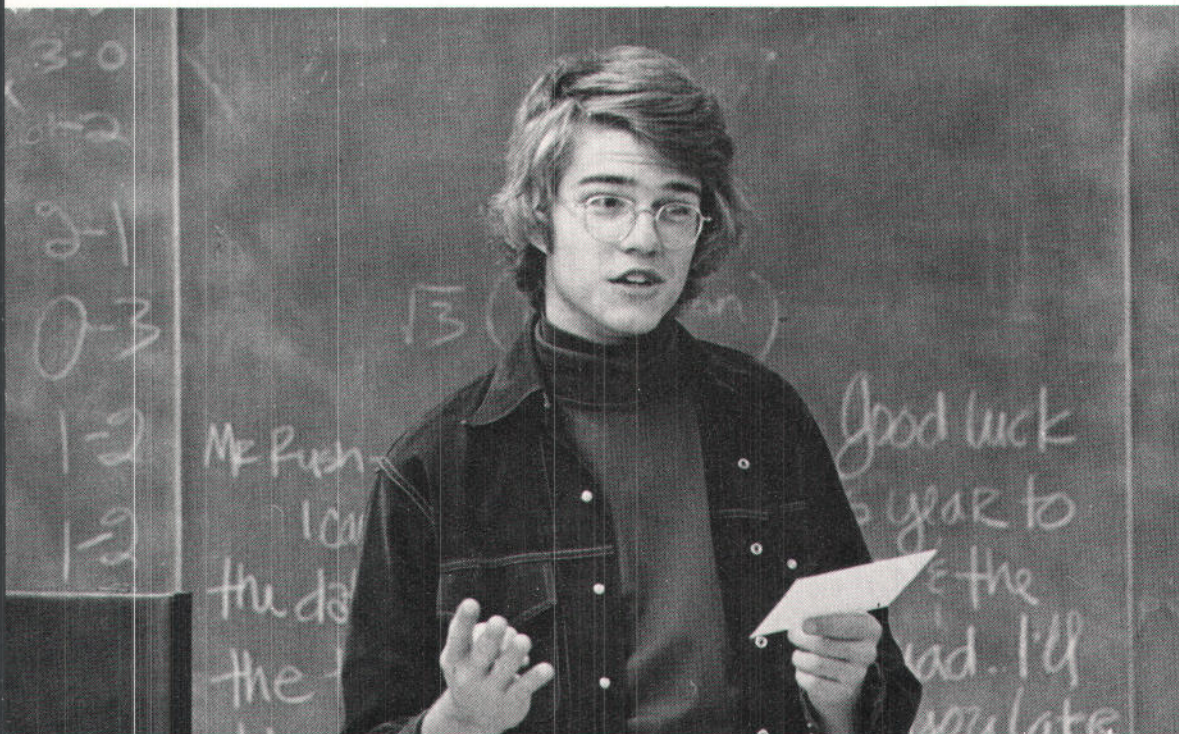

Debbie gave of herself wholeheartedly — she always displayed a deep concern for others. Wadsworth is one person who is content with life and looking towards the future. Coming up with new ideas, she strived to see those ideas put into practice. We will long remember Debbie as a sincere friend and effective leader.

Colleen Lignell Historian

Colleen made it a point to enjoy her work as Student Body Historian. Regardless of inevitable pressures, she always appeared quite casual and relaxed. Along with her enthusiastic attitude and flexible personality, came her ability to make friends quite easily. Caring and having fun, Lignell always seemed to fit in well.

Jeff Nelson 2nd Vice President

In trying to grab all the gusto in life, Jeff met occasional opposition. Despite this criticism, he continued to make his fascination with Sophomore "tomatoes" obvious, and he insisted on howling above everyone else at the ball games. Most importantly, he applied his enthusiasm to school activities so that others might enjoy life.

Displaying great concern about strengths and weaknesses of our school, the devoted individuals in these two governing bodies were able to avoid unimportant matters so that they might better look at significant ones from every angle.

This year, more than ever,
male supremacy was challenged.
(Where were you, when they needed you,

They were however, consoled
in that, as chauvinist pigs,
their organization
was appropriately named.

Sophomore Officers

Kevin Simons
President

Along with being a Sophomore come the pains of feeling "awkward" or "out of it." This year, Sophomores managed to bypass such feelings due largely to the efforts of their officers. Kevin, Anita and Julie set out early in the year to involve Sophomores in the mainstream of school affairs. Kevin's eager willingness to please, Anita's uninhibited enthusiasm, and Julie's efficient organizational ability made these three stand out like "Screaming Yellow Zonkers in a world of plain popcorn."

Anita Young
Vice President

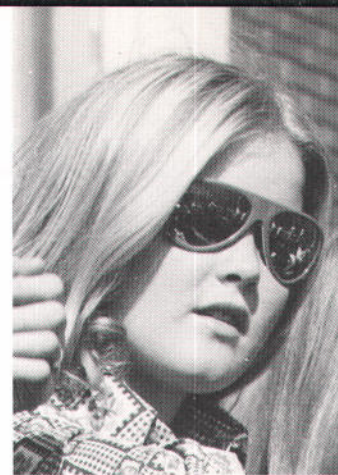

Julie Broadbent
Secretary

It was not so difficult
 as I had often been told.
 On the contrary,
 I found a place to be.
 It was apparent that this place
 was not where I wished
 to remain permanently,
 just somewhere to begin.
 If I needed to go out of my way,
 I did.
 Seniors weren't really superior.
 A moment ago —
 they were all insecure and ambitious —
 the typical sophomore.

The Sophomore year was to be an "awakening to life."
Unfortunately, some Sophomores missed the point and remained in a daze.

Of those who did come to life,
most were able to sufficiently avoid starting off from the wrong side of the bed.

Had it not been for a special demonstration and helpful hints provided by the Cafeteria ladies, Sophomores would still be collecting their milk bags, thinking them to be portions out of a "make-it-yourself" waterbed series.

Junior Class Officers

Steve Niederhauser President

The Junior Class Officers combined a rousing sense of humor with consistent work that kept Juniors "hopping." Steve acted as the "perpetual idea maker," Doug as the "foreman" to get things rolling while Kim added the needed "push" to make sure everything was complete. These three achieved excellence in whatever they undertook whether it was editing the directory, reinstating the class party or sponsoring the annual Prom.

Doug Evans Vice President

Kimalee Hill Secretary

Juniors were something Sophomores could look up to and Seniors down upon. They could look at what surrounded them objectively, for this was not the beginning and certainly nowhere near the end. They found themselves looking out, from "somewhere in between."

As long as Juniors don't worry too much about high school, they'll be okay. A quick nap in the courtyard or a game of football with friends in the park is always good therapy, especially if it's at the expense of third period.

It seemed important to be

Senior Class Officers

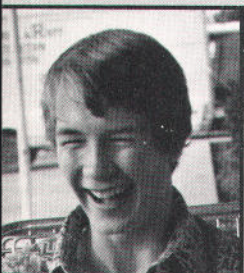

Mark Reichman President

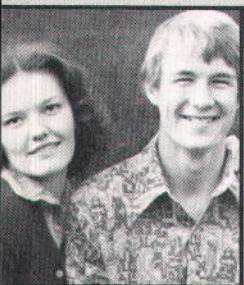

Producing a Senior movie, organizing displays, parties and taking charge of graduation festivities was NO easy task; but Mark, Jeff and Lana skillfully took care of these duties for the Class of '74. Mark's easy going attitude set a relaxed atmosphere; Jeff, alias Reed, Judd, Alien, etc., contributed to Senior affairs in just being himself — while Lana rallied the girls together, fulfilling her role as the "Senior Chiquitas" top banana.

This was the last scene
of our one-act performance.
We, as seniors, stood carefree and relaxed,
knowing soon it would all be over.
Tradition had it that seniors would always be apathetic.
We played the same role
on an old stage,
seldom stopping to show any emotion.
Sometimes it was so ironical . . .
but still we portrayed the scenes
as they had been written.

Senior men and Senior women are famous for going their separate ways. While the "men" spent weekends courting sophomore "tomatoes," the "women" banded together, put on their white-hooded sweat shirts and sought salvation in cruising the neighborhoods of other schools.

Our moods changed often,
slipping in then out.
We found ourselves powerless,
adrift in a stream
that swelled and plunged with an inconsistency
that kept us wondering.
When we needed answers,
we could find only questions.
When we should have asked questions,
we were far too cool
to even care.

Pausing to study those faces
I hardly know,
I try to memorize
the smiles and voices.
One day that will be very important.
There is little between now and then.
Only vague portraits
my mind has remembered.
Our time is gone.
