Office Assistants

Having had access to countless pads of pink, yellow, home excuse and sign-in slips, office assistants were very popular. But unlike most politicians, these workers never gave in to threats or bribery.

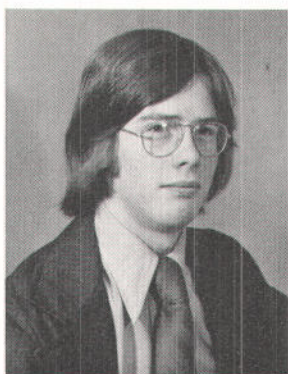

Library assistants cheerfully trudged down the extra steps to the temporary library each day. Their job was more difficult this year in that daily operations did not run as smoothly as they did upstairs.

Arguing for a guaranteed annual income one hour, then against it in the next round was only one of the difficulties faced by this year's debaters. They found their rewards, however, in that they were once again feared by everyone in the state and they developed the ability to fluster and subtly insult their opponents while maintaining a guiltless smile.

Sacrificing a little pleasure in order to spend more time working for an "A" in one class or another, was the mark of an intellectual. For this elite group, maintaining a high average in each of the three years wasn't easy, but there was always the summer to look forward to.

ORGANIZATIONS

Cheerleaders

Paul Young

Paul is one of those rare persons everybody likes. Even the non-spirited types would cheer if Paul asked them to. Paul spent hours organizing and arranging, to make sure athletes received all the support they might need from the stands.

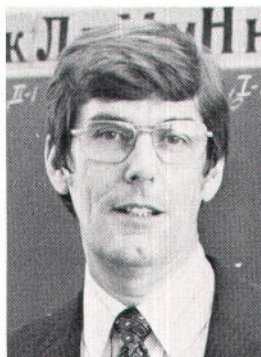

Terese Williams

Terese's sparkling sideline manner always attracted attention. Transferring her exuberance to spectators seemed to come naturally for her. When the chips were down, Terese never gave up "giving her all."

Jon Hale

Even though Jon's emotions were sometimes only half expressed, they were evident. His own special wit had a way of making us all laugh. Jon was one guy that was out to share happiness.

Dean Collett

Marian Hammond

Adding her own special touch to our cheerleaders, Marian created a pleasant atmosphere for all to enjoy. She had her own way of making activities seem exciting and of wanting everyone to get involved.

Rick Child

No matter what Rick undertook, one could always find him clowning around. With his distinctive laugh and his personable attitude, it was easy for him to make friends and gain everyone's respect.

Margaret Hammond

Margaret radiated excitement and found enjoyment in every aspect of life. Her smile and enthusiastic personality fostered school spirit even from many of the more apathetic students.

Pep Club

We were lucky to once again have a throng of girls that would devote most of their leisure time to getting the teams and studentbody psyched by making original banners. They were one group that became intoxicated with school spirit and displayed a deep and abiding interest in both the athletic activities and the activities of the athletes.

A new and rewarding addition to Highland's organizations was the Aries Club. This club took the place of Hi-Debs and acted as our service club. Dressed in sharp black and white plaids, these girls were responsible for several blooming romances after distributing singing valentines.

There were moments of obnoxious laughter
and other days
of disagreement.
There were times
we made sacrifices
only to find that what we did wasn't what we wanted, but perhaps it was this
that made us so strong.
We lived in the outside world
reserving one period
to a season in itself.

Rambler

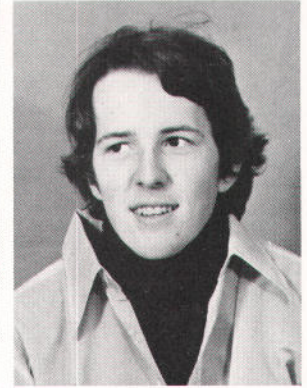

Neither the gas or newsprint shortage affected the publication of 11 issues of the All-American rated Rambler. Trips to the printer in Bountiful were still made and the presses continued to roll out 2,000 copies of each issue. The Rambler remained one of Highland's proudest possessions.

In Black and White

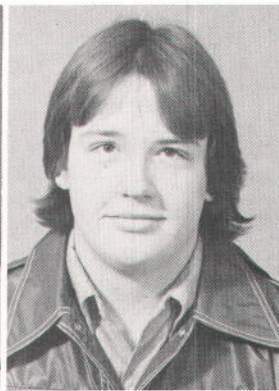

During the occasional arguing, it was surprising that this year's "In Black and White Staff" wasn't known as the "In Black and Blue." But like a happy ending to a good fairy tale, poem, or short story, they were able to patch up difficulties and publish a very impressive magazine. Thus, this year ended in unique friendship.

Assembly Committee

Writing assemblies takes wit, time, and patience. Right from the very first, this committee met the challenges of making the optional assemblies interesting enough to draw a large attendance. The ever increasing size of the audience was a testimony to their long hours of work.

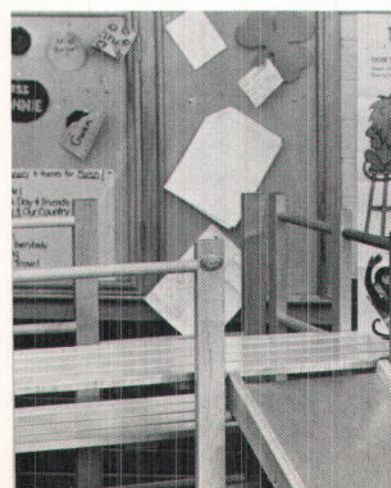

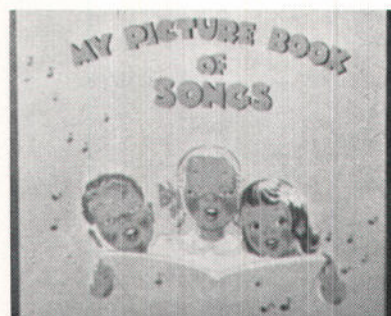

Project Inform

Conversing with important figures of society in a relaxed atmosphere is what Project Inform was all about. It gives one the opportunity to learn of new ideas and opinions of persons more knowledgeable than ourselves.

Highland's renowned "canaries" carried on the organization's tradition of excellence for '74. A Cappella members were always very vocal and visible throughout the course of the year as they sang at assemblies from the balcony and trudged through Christmas snows for special engagements. Only on test days, were the singers no where to be seen or heard.

Junior Choir

"I've got a cold!" pleads a nervous Soprano. "Well try it anyway," replies Mr. "C." Sophomoric tricks designed to rid students of singing solos didn't work anymore — Junior Choir was the "big time." Daily rehearsals and strict directorship paid off as these Junior vocalists finally produced music from nothing more than notes and words.

Madrigals

A rousing chorus of "Good Morning" a foot-stamping, hand-clapping version of "Hava Negila" and the tenor sections preoccupation with altos characterized this prestigious group. The Madrigals knew, undoubtedly, that they were the best "Mads" Highland ever had — but, of course, that's what they think every year.

Community requests for a performance by the Jazz Ensemble were frequently heard. In only two short years this group has established a top reputation. Dressed in wild red and black plaids the jazz folks delighted every audience they chose to favor.

Orchestra

The lights go off. Everyone is silent. Suddenly intriguing sounds of real music, and the spotlight is focused on Highland's renowned orchestra at work. A group of individual sounds becomes harmony and students find adventure in their accomplishments.

Gymnastic Club

The gymnastic club worked hard to represent Highland as well as in past years. At least once a week, these talented females used their bodies to create a physical form of art. Performing with a distinct grace and balance, once again, several individuals went on from Region to State Competition with superior qualities and high ratings.

Two qualities are vital for dance clubbers — they must be able to “kick up a storm” for their annual concert, but they also need a slightly zany sense of the absurd to get them through the long winter months of rehearsals. When the dancers weren’t pleaing or pirouetting in the studio, they were either chasing mice in Miss Ridges’ office or collecting pin-ups of their inspiration — Mark Spitz.
